Dreamtime Story - How the Birds got their Colours by Mary ...

How The Birds Got Their Colours is an old yarn of a small thread in the vast and intricate web of The Dreaming. Growing up, it was always one of me and my sisters' favourites. How the Birds Got Their Colours tells many stories, but what it impresses upon me most is the idea of identity. It is when the birds receive their splashes of colour of the pink of the Galah and the mixed palate of the Rainbow Lorikeet that they finally become themselves.

Many years ago... many, many years ago... birds weren't what they are today. They were featherless, naked little animals without wings. They were quite a disturbing sight. In those days... many, many years ago there was a little town known as 'The Place Where the Trees Stand Still', and that's exactly the kind of town it was. Trees had no reason to move, since there was no wind to sway their leaves. Music didn't exist either. Since birds didn't sing, no one had been given the idea to make music. The only noise heard was the ruckus the animals made each time they saw a bird. Why? Because birds were the ugliest animals in this place where the trees stood still.

This book is based on a story told by Mary Albert, of the Bardi people, to Aboriginal children living in Broome, Western Australia. The illustrations are adapted from their paintings of the story. Mary Albert said, 'Would you like to hear a story from long ago? My mother used to tell me lots of stories, but this story I loved the best, because I loved the birds.'

Swallow and starling, puffin and peregrine, blue tit and blackcap. We use these names so often that few of us ever pause to wonder about their origins. What do they mean? Where did they come from? And who created them? The words we use to name birds are some of the most lyrical and evocative in the English language. They also tell incredible stories: of epic expeditions, fierce battles between rival ornithologists, momentous historical events and touching romantic gestures. Through fascinating encounters with birds, and the rich cast of characters who came up with their names, in Mrs Moreau's Warbler Stephen Moss takes us on a remarkable journey through time. From when humans and birds first shared the earth to our fraught present-day coexistence, Moss shows how these names reveal as much about ourselves and our relationship with the natural world as about the creatures they describe.

"An Aboriginal story'.

Side-by-side texts in English and Chippewa relate the Chippewa legend of how birds came to have their colors.

Thirty-three authentic, unaltered Aboriginal stories are brought to you by Aboriginal storyteller custodians. Unlike other compilations, these stories are presented with approval from Aboriginal elders in an effort to help foster a better understanding of the history and culture of the Aboriginal people; they are accompanied by a historical overview and other background information about Australia's oldest still-existing culture.

Everybody knows about Snow White. Now let's get to know about one more enchantress, Princess Rose and her story with Golden Bird.

Sparrows are as complicated as they are common. This is an essential guide to identifying 76 kinds, along with a fascinating history of human interactions with them. What, exactly, is a sparrow? All birders (and many non-birders) have essentially the same mental image of a pelican, a duck, or a flamingo, and a guide dedicated to waxwings or kingfishers would need nothing more than a sketch and a single sentence to satisfactorily identify its subject. Sparrows are harder to pin down. This book covers one family (Passerellidae), which includes towhees and juncos, and 76 members of the sparrow clan. Birds have a human history, too, beginning with their significance to native cultures and continuing through their discovery by science, their taxonomic fortunes and misfortunes, and their prospects for survival in a world with ever less space for wild creatures. This book includes not just facts and measurements, but stories--of how birds got their names and how they were discovered--of their entanglement with human history.

Many years ago, before the world bloomed in magnificent colors, the Earth lay stark and gray. The animals that graced its skies and roamed its lands were the colors of dirt, clay, and stone until Rainbow descended to bestow her colors on the creatures of the world. Each bird asked for a bright and beautiful color: green for Parrot, red for Cardinal, and yellow for Canary. But will there be any colors left for little Gouldian Finch? He soon learns the power of patience and the beauty of all creatures. Based on a Belgian folktale, this beautifully told and illustrated tale is a timeless treasure for every collection.
