One of the most insidious intrusions on Americans' personal privacy and freedom in recent years has been the increasingly pervasive practice of urine testing. Since the introduction of federal drug testing regulations by the Reagan administration, Americans have more and more often been required to pee in a cup in order to prove their worthiness for employment, insurance, medical treatment, child custody, extracurricular activities in schools, workers' compensation, security clearance, participation in athletics, military service, and personal liberty from prison. Behind this practice lies the scientifically unwarranted assumption that a person's fitness can be determined by the chemistry of their urine or other bodily fluids, much like the fictional, crackpot Laputans satirized by Jonathan Swift in Gulliver's Travels. In fact, drug testing does not measure fitness or impairment, but rather the presence of certain drug residues that may have no deleterious effect at all. This is especially the case with marijuana, the most popular, safe, and medically useful illegal drug, whose presence is typically detectable for days or weeks after last use by urine testing, long after any impairing effects have faded. Ironically, urine testing is far more sensitive to marijuana than more dangerous drugs, such as opiates, amphetamines, and alcohol (which isn't even checked for in urine tests). Therefore drug testing can have the counterproductive effect of encouraging workers to move from marijuana to more dangerous, less detectable substances such as designer drugs, alcohol, and prescription narcotics, while at the same time depriving them of the medicinal benefits of cannabis. Moreover, of course, it subjects users and non-users alike to an obnoxious invasion of intimate bodily privacy.

Counterpoint manuals have long been central to the music education of composers, historians, and theorists. In this book a conductor uses counterpoint exercises to aid musicians in becoming sensitive to the fundamental ingredients of good music making.

The author presents an account of her sister's suicide, and the lifelong impact that the suicide has had on her own life and the lives of the other members of her family.

An entertaining and illuminating collection of 100 surprising connections between math and the arts. At first glance, the worlds of math and the arts might not seem like comfortable neighbors. But as mathematician John D. Barrow points out, they have a strong and natural affinity—after all, math is the study of all patterns, and the world of the arts is rich with pattern. Barrow whisks us through 100 thought-provoking and often whimsical intersections between math and many arts, from the golden ratios of Mondrian's rectangles and the curious fractal-like nature of Pollock's drip paintings to ballerinas' gravity-defying leaps and the next generation of monkeys on typewriters tackling Shakespeare. For those of us with our feet planted more firmly on the ground, Barrow also wields everyday equations to reveal how many guards are needed in an art gallery or where you should stand to look at sculptures. From music and drama to literature and the visual arts, Barrow's witty and accessible observations are sure to spark the imaginations of math nerds and art aficionados alike.

Bruno van Pottelsberghe, Solvay Brussels School of Economics and Management, ULB, Belgium The Economic Valuation of Patents provides an original and essential analysis of patent valuation, presenting the main methodologies to value patents in different contexts. Starting with an analysis of the relevance of patent valuation from a strategic, economic and legal perspective, the book undertakes a thorough review of the existing financial and qualitative valuation methodologies.
