What's the first step to teaching manners to a toddler? 1. Model good manners. If you didn't have good manners before, now is the time to learn them. My book has the manners children to age 12 need to know (and most of the etiquette rules adults need to know, too). Both Chea and I make sure we use good manners around Zoey (and with Zoey).

Pointing at others. In most of the world, it's considered rude to point at someone (or even point in any direction in general). Instead, teach your kids to gently gesture in the direction they are speaking of. Kids also have a tendency to stare at others, especially those who may be different than them.

Toddler Manner #4: Use table manners. This is a big one for me. Kids are disrespecting everyone at the table if they are not using utensils, slurping their soup, or talking with their mouth open among many other rude and gross infractions. Basic table manners are a must, especially in a large family when a lot of people are all eating together.

5 Basic Manners to Teach Your Toddler (and how to do it)

Involve your child in setting the table. Lead by example and show good table manners yourself. Your child may feel more inclined to copy your behaviour if you promote them to a 'big' chair rather than their highchair. Give them the same kind of place setting as yours but don't give them sharp cutlery.
