Why might investors want to use a limited company? From a purely financial perspective, there are three obvious reasons why you might want to hold property as a company rather than yourself. 1. Tax treatment of profits. If you own a property in your own name, the profits you make from renting it out will be added to your other earnings (such as from your job) and taxed as income tax. But if instead you hold it within a company, the profits will be liable for Corporation Tax instead.
